Sixshooters and Winchesters Rammed into the Faces of Employes

A Texas Editor Knocked Down for the Publication of an Article

An unknown man who was stealing a ride on the foremost baggage car was instantly crushed to death and the passengers and trainmen were badly shaken up.

The engineer and fireman had scarcely recovered from their shock when sixshooters and winchesters were rammed into their faces and they were ordered to lead the van in a march upon the express car.

The robbers had turned the switch and caused the wreck. They entered the express car and after a short resistance from Messenger Nesbitt went through the safe, securing, it is claimed, something less than $200.

After they had gone through this car the robbers marched the engineer, fireman and messenger about 100 yards from the railroad track, seated them on a log and told them to stay there with their eyes shut for one hour. When the bandits had gone a distance of about fifty yards they turned and fired a volley at the men holding down the log. The messenger was shot through the left hand and another bullet pierced his ear. The robbers then disappeared. It required but a short time to notify the officers here, who are now in pursuit of the bandits.

One party has been arrested and is now in custody, but has not yet been fully identified.

Monday afternoon $10,000 in silver was taken from the Southern express company's office up town and carried to the depot. This was sent north.

It is supposed the robbers were on the outlook, but made a mistake, thinking the money was to go south.

When the train left the track Conductor A. B. Shover, who was in charge of the train, went running to the front to ascertain the cause of the trouble. He was called on to halt, but continued to advance, not thinking of the danger. The first man he came across was one of the robbers. The conductor flashed his lantern in the bandit's face; the latter shoved a revolver under the other's nose and again ordered a retreat.

Stage Held Up.

LAREDO, Tex., June 7.—The stage running between New Laredo and Guerrero, Mexico, which left the former city at 5:25 p. m. Thursday with Mexican mail and two passengers, was held up by two Mexican bandits about twenty miles down the Rio Grande. One passenger, whose name thus far is unknown, was robbed of $700. The other passenger, Mr. Bolivar J. Pridgeon, of Victoria, Tex., late United States consul at Piedras Negras, Mexico, but at present engaged in collecting the bonded indebtedness of the frontier counties for the United States census department, jumped from the stage and took to his heels through the brush in the darkness of the night. Though fired at by the robbers he made good his escape, as a telegram received at 5 o'clock Friday evening from him at Guerrero, Mexico, states that he arrived there in safety.

Spring Palace Pays Off.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 9.—Some of the insurance companies have already paid the spring palace loss, and there will be no unnecessary delay in the payment of the remainder. For the last three days Secretary Greene and President Paddock have been busy paying off claims against the palace. There is sufficient money in the treasury to pay everything and have a goodly sum left besides. The indebtedness of last year has been discharged entirely, and next year the palace management will have besides the insurance money several thousand dollars to begin with. There is also an amount of $15,000 of uncollected subscriptions donated early in the spring. Most of this is due by responsible parties and will doubtless be paid next year when it is called for.

The Burnet County Tragedy.

MARBLE FALLS, Tex., June 6.—George Lacy came to town Thursday and said that he had shot and killed his brother-in-law, Code Phillips, a few hours before, near his (Lacy's) residence, and gave directions by which the officers could find the body of Phillips. Justice Tucker, with Officer Miller and a jury, repaired to the place of the killing Thursday night and an inquest was held. The jury have not brought in a verdict yet, but the facts as brought to light indicate that family trouble was the cause of the killing. Both men are old and wealthy citizens of Burnet county and have numerous friends and relatives. They own a great deal of land in this county and heretofore have always been on friendly terms.

Still Alive.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 10.—Clara Julian, the young woman who shot herself Satuday, is still alive but her conditions very precarious. She is a daughter of a respectable farmer of Medina county and came here in search of a truant lover. She wrote several letters before shooting herself, one of which was addressed to her lover. She stated to her physician that she had been betrayed by her perfidious lover and came here to induce him to marry her. She wrote to him asking him to call upon her Saturday evening but he sent a friend in his place and the result was that she determined to end her life.

Arrested for Perjury.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 10.—Thomas McAlpine, a well-known saloonkeeper of Brackettville was brought here yesterday under arrest charged with perjury in connection with the trial of Postmaster Gildea in the federal court. McAlpine was a witness for Gildea and swore that he made application for a money order on Jan. 8, whereas the United States district attorney asserts in his affidavit that the application was made on the 9th. It is said other arrests will follow in connection with the case.

A Prisoner's Leap.

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., June 10.—In the penitentiary yesterday evening a convict by the name of William Carey, from Grayson county, sentenced to two years for burglary and received in the wall April 30 last, precipitated himself from the gallery of the upper tier of cells, breaking both legs at the knees, right arm at the elbow and otherwise receiving internal injuries from which there is very little hope of his recovery. The man has been considered crazy by the officials ever since he was received and has been watched closely. Yesterday one of the building tenders having occasion to go into the cell opened the door, when the unfortunate man ran by him and threw himself off, falling a distance of about thirty-five feet upon a solid concrete pavement. Dr. Bush, the prison physician, was in the prison at the time and sent for other physicians, who promptly responded, but nothing was done except to keep up animation.

A Husband's Revenge.

DALLAS, Tex., June 6.—At 1:30 o'clock this morning Frank Quinn, a negro, appeared at the police headquarters with a bloody ax in his hand. He said: "I have killed my wife and a man whom I found in the room with her just awhile ago with this ax," and from behind the bars made the following confession: "I work and sleep down on the Trunk railroad. I have been in Dallas three weeks. I came from Matthews' mill near Texarkana. My wife left there before I did. When I came to Dallas I found out that she was in Fort Worth. I went over there and got her to come back with me. She said she would live all right after this. We had no home. While I slept out near the Trunk railroad she has slept in an alley in the city until a few nights ago when I have seen her with this negro I killed to-night. I did the killing up at Frogtown. I don't know who lives at the house. I have been laying around the house ever since dark and have watched my wife and this negro. I slipped in the room with the ax and hit the man first and then my wife. They hollored and screamed. I said: 'Frank's got you now.' I then got out and came down here. Liza Simmons and her husband slept in the next room to where I did the killing."

By the time Frank Quinn had completed this statement a woman covered with bloody garments entered the patrol station. She said: "I am Frank Quinn's wife. I was in the room with Liza Simmons and her husband. Frank came in and hit me with something and then went in and hit the man. I think he killed him. It was dark and there was no light. The man is named Ben Nelson. He was sleeping in the kitchen." Quinn's wife had a horrible gash in her right arm made by the ax and other bruises about her person.

Editor Knocked Down.

WEATHERFORD, Tex., June 11.—Monday evening was the first issue of the Daily Constitution and in it was an expression like this: "The Constitution mourns the loss of an esteemed subscriber, viz., a Republican who knows there is no hell, and has doubts if there be a God and heaven, and discontinued the paper because it is too hard on the Republicans.'" It seems that this gentle man was Mr. C. C. Baker. After the publication of the paper, Col. Styles, the editor, and Mr. Baker met at the Carson and Lewis house and indulged in hard works when Mr. Baker knocked the colonel down. The gentlemen are both prominent and well liked and the affair is much regretted by all their friends.

Child Brutally Assaulted.

PARIS, Tex., June 7.—Thursday evening as the 7-year-old daughter of Collector Gose was returning home from school she was followed for several blocks by a negro lad about 13 years old, beating her with the branch of a tree until a little colored boy about 8 years old with a dog came to her rescue and made his dog chase her assailant away. The scamp was identified yesterday morning as Lem Johnson and his mother gave him a sound drubbing. He has been caught several times before beating small children whom he caught in the streets.

Died of His Wounds.

SAN ANGELO, Tex., June 7.—The negro, Dave Young, who was shot here by an unknown party early Thursday morning, died Thursday night. There is no trace of the murderer, and officers who followed him going west have returned. Those who saw him running his horse after the shooting give conflicting descriptions as to his appearance, and it is doubtful if captured whether the assassin could be identified.

Woman Struck With a Hatchet.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 9.—Yesterday morning about 10 o'clock George Gularick, the Turk who has the dancing bear and other animals, had a quarrel with his wife. She resented some of his language by throwing a cup of coffee at him, whereupon, it is alleged, he struck her with the flat side of a hatchet. The woman screamed and the officers came and arrested her husband.

Moving Toward Zero.

VAN HORN, El Paso Co., Tex., June 6.—The conductor on the east-bound train last night reports hail a foot deep fifteen or twenty miles west of here, and as the train passed Sierra Blanca it was snowing. A very heavy rain, and probably hail, passed south and north of here this evening. This is the first rain in this country in more than a year. Indications are good for more rain.

Railroader Knockout by a P g.

TEXARKANA, Tex., June 9.—Freight Conductor W. G. Kelley of the Texas and Pacific railroad was riding on the engine near the junction, four miles west of here. The engine struck a pig that was on the track and Kelley was thrown off. His collar bone and two ribs in the left side were broken. He was brought here, cared for at the Cosmopolitan and taken to his home at Longview.

Woman Shoots Herself.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 9.—Cora Julian, a 20-year-old woman, shot herself yesterday on account of a difference with her lover. The young woman had a quarrel with her lover and because he refused to yield to her demands she made an effort to shuffle off by the pistol route. The bullet penetrated her liver and she may die.

Arrested for Murder.

LAREDO, Tex., June 10.—J. Tews, alias Joe Ray, charged with murdering his wife in Bexar county on the 16th day of last August has been arrested near Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, where he will be held until the arrival of extradition papers. All credit is due to City Marshal Eugen Yglesias.

Mr. J. S. Young has filed a suit for damages amounting to $50,000 against Mr. George Rutherford of Arkansas. About four or five months ago an attempt was made to assassinate Mr. Young by shooting twice through his window. Mr. Rutherford is one of the wealthiest farmers in the neighborhood of Batesville. The case is to be tried at the next term of the circuit court, which convenes at Batesville the first Monday in July.

Yes, sir, Hogg.

"I see the star of hope arising."—Oppressed farmers.

Oh, my! Judge Cook "must save the democracy."

Back! back! How dare you longer throttle the wishes of the people.

The Texas Farmer is doing good work for Hogg and the commission.

We clip from the Farmersville Times some good democratic sentiments.

That Dallas nomination was made to give prestige, you know.

Hail fell to the depth of one foot in El Paso county, last Friday.

He that labors for the interest of the people is a hero, and will be honored.

Heaven has decreed the protection of the poor, and the poor must favor those measures looking to their relief.

A man named Larrey, living in Chicago, shot his wife and then committed suicide last Friday morning.

Warwick Clark and his watered stock disciples are writhing between the d—l and the deep sea. It seems that Clark is about to lose his grip.

When the old political manipulators of Texas meet their Waterloo Democracy will have lost nothing.

Three thousand people gathered at Linden, Tex., last Friday, to witness the hanging of three men, Tom Miles, Fletcher and Henry Holden.

The political priests of Texas have long enjoyed a rare feast in rounding up the voting cattle: A stampede is promised, after which better democratic pasture will be found.

To the Fort Worth Gazette: You topped that Dallas News editorial off to perfection. The heading looked so natural poised upon such a bosh anti-commission skeleton.

To Attorney-general Hogg: The blood-hounds of monopoly are on your trail, but the people will open wide the gubernatorial gates and help you to pass safely in.

In the neighborhood of Midland, Texas, hail fell with such force as to kill a large number of rabbits. A man going into the town of Midland last Friday found fifty-three dead rabbits.

Jack Handley, editor and proprietor of the Huron (South Dakota) Herald, was shot and killed by his son Fred Handley last Friday, June 6. The slayer was only 16 years of age.

Davis, the slayer of Mr. B. C. Evans at Fort Worth some months ago, has had every showing at law, and now that the higher courthas affirmed the decision of the lower courts, death by hanging is a certainty, unless the governor interferes.

Hogg for Governor.

At the last biennial meeting of the state democratic convention the corporation agents selected J. S. Hogg for attorney general thinking they had a servile tool as usual.

When Hogg took the oath of office and was installed he saw that the severest penalties had been inflicted upon petty stealing while corporations and combines had been permitted to steal millions and go free.

Mr. Hogg set about to enforce the law in all cases, against the high and the low, the strong and weak.

He distinguished himself in the history of modern Texas government by laying bare the schemes of public plunderers.

To the rightful owners he has saved hard earned millions.

The result of Mr. Hogg's action is very natural. Those who thought they were catching an average sucker are greatly insensed at Hogg. They are emptying their bitterest vials of wrath upon him. All their cunning schemes and desperate means are being used to defeat him in his aspirations to the governor's office. The industrial classes are clamoring for Mr. Hogg's promotion while the monopolies are using their utmost diligence to defeat him. Mr. Hogg's vigorous campaign spread consternation among the opposition. They have ransacked the state for a leader to pit against him and found none. After administering all the old time opiates they find the public pulse still fluttering with great Hoggishness.

The extreme desperations of this crew of politicians may be noted by their late candidate who is noted for his bitter denunciation of the laboring classes of Texas.

The socalled "democratic" leaders of Texas are carefully planning the defeat of Mr. Hogg at the San Antonio convention. If they succeed, the industrial interests of the state will continue to wail and wane while our lofty nabobs will continue to feed and fatten on their ill-gotten gains.

The storm is brewing and we soon will see the issue.

Local political managers have presumed that Hogg is not wanted and so the county will be made to speak at state convention. It is a common opinion that this county is largely in favor of Hogg for governor. It is our duty to get a fair expression of the popular voice on this question. This can be quietly and surely ascertained by meetings at each school-house and a careful canvass made.

This question rises above all local questions.

All should be invited to give their decision for or against.

The question should be squarely made on Hogg and the commission.

Let us hear from our readers on this question.

The Plano papers and the McKinney DEMOCRAT, formerly strong Throckmorton advocates, are now equally strong for Hogg.—Garland News.

Speaking for the Enquirer, we will have to inform you, Bro. Collum, that you are off a little when you say the Plano papers are for Hogg.—Plano Enquirer.

Speaking for the DEMOCRAT, Bro. Collum, we don't "have to" inform you that this paper is is in favor of Gen. Hogg, as its columns speak out in splain, unmistakable language. Gen. Hogg has shown his grit in standing up in the face of monopoly and championing the commission which is the people's hope of relief from railroad domination. Three cheers for Hogg, the people's candidate for governor.

Let the will of the people be done.

Candidates should discuss measures, not men.

This is the year for all true democrats to elevate justice.

Let justice be done though every demagogue falls.

A runaway horse is worse'n a runaway wife, because it sometimes takes you with it.—Ex.

The prospects are that the Trinity river from Dallas will be opened to navigation.

Wanted—Some one to cook a big-sized Texas Hogg.—George Clark et al.

When navigation sets in on the Trinity, Dallas will wag its finger at Fort Worth.

If we can't get a Cook to attend to Hogg, we'll try to Hall him off.—Geo. Clark et al.

There is no middle ground in this issue.—Mercury.

No; but there are some would be middle men.

Dr. Rutherford of Denton, who was thrown from a wild horse about afortnight ago and had his shoulder blade broken, is fast recovering.

Sometimes when a man seems to be havin' the worst luck he's only getting ready to come out like a log, from a saw-mill, worth double price.

Prejudice is not wise, never was wise. And a man who is controlled by prejudice, has a fool for a master.—Exchange.

Whew! Then many a person is governed by a fool.

To Gustave Cook: The laboring masses of Texas remember your onslaught on them and will return the compliment all along the line.—Dallas Mercury.

There are some papers which oppose ballot reform, railroad commission, etc., and yet claim to be good democratic journals. What kind of democracy is it, anyhow.

To the candidates: You fought a good fight, and if in the mysterious ways of politics a crown of honor don't fall on all your heads now, keep a stiff upper lip; it may come in the near future.—Examiner.

Gosh!

Though the beautiful Spring Palace at Fort Worth was reduced to ashes by the devouring flames, yet the spirit of enterprise is beginning to manifest itself among that wide-awake people, and Texas can rest assured that another and probably more beautiful palace will greet the world next year. At least this is our belief.

About the way it goes with the "conservatives:" "I am opposed to Hogg, but favor Throckmorton." Throckmorton withdraws. "I am opposed to Hogg, but favor McDonald." Off goes McDonald. "I am opposed to Hogg, but favor Hall," but as Hall does not seem to fit the socket, they cast about and now comes the husky cry: "I am oppose to Hogg, but favor Cook. Next.

If it be possible that an anti-commission candidate should be nominated for governor at the next state convention, what are the people going to do about it? What! Vote in favor of railroad robbery! vote a continuance of the yoke of appression! Such unmitigated tomfolery has been acted out long enough. Surely the intelligence of the people will assert itself this year. Men of Texas, true democrats, how can the ballot box be yielded any longer to corporations.

The followers of Gustave Cook are springing up all over the state. Out of 60 votes of counties which have held conventions 31 votes are instructed for Hogg for governor. It don't look much like a two-third vote on first ballot, does it?—Ex

The followers of Gustave Cook are the same element who followed McDonald. They very naturally "spring up." However no Cook journal can convince the people that a commission is not necessary; neither can their blatant howl about a large anti-commission following arrest the determination of the people to secure a staunch commission governor. Hogg is favored by the people because his position is for the interest of the people.

"Harmonious Convention."

We submit the following without comment:

The ticket nominated by the convention on Saturday last will meet the approbation of all concerned. He who scratches the name of a nominee can not safely be called a straight democrat.—Enquirer.

What did the question of prohibition have to do with the race for tax collector, anyway?—Farmersville Times.

The ticket nominated by the democratic convention last Saturday gives general satisfaction, except in the nomination of McKinney, and in this instance no objection is heard to Mr. McKinney, but to the methods employed to secure his nomination.—Farmersville Times.

The Times panders to no class prejudice, but proposes to stand or fall upon its merits as an impartial newspaper. It will be democratic as long as the present management stands at the helm, but it will expose rottenness and wrong where-ever found. Right is riht.—Farmersville Times.

The McKinney correspondent of the Dallas News, speaking of the democratic convention at that place last Saturday, makes the cool and unblushing statement that it was composed of the largest and most representative body of men ever assembled in the county. The real truth of the matter is, they were sent up from primaries that were attended by scarcely twelve hundred voters all told, and the total voting strength of the county is over seven thousand. This is the way the people attend claptrap conventions. A primary election makes such jobbery as characterized the convention last Saturday almost impossible, and a primary election it will be two years hence. Mark the prediction.—Farmersville Times.

Will Jno. W. McKinney set aside the nomination so unfairly obtained and go with Wms. Warden defore the primaries again? Knowing the sterling worth and splendid character of the man, we are almost persuaded to believe that he will.—Farmersville Times.

The rank injustice done Wms. Warden in the county convention last Saturday has raised a storm of indignation in many sections of the county. If that wrong is not corrected it will bear bitter fruit before the November election.—Farmersville Times.

Dr. A. H. Neathery, Jno. H. Smith, J. J. McDonald, W. Y. Carver and T. A. Edwards understood their instructions sufficiently to stand by the second choice of this primary after the first choice was out of the race for collector. Five out of the eight decided that Wms. Warden was the second choice and entitled to the entire vote of Precinct No. 2 under the rules. Three men dissented and bolted, deliberately giving the nomination to the man who received the least number of votes in their primary. At this place Warden received 32 votes and McKinney only 16.—Farmersville Times.

Resolved, That our delegates be instructed to cast a unit vote in the county convention if it be found that other precincts have adopted such rule.—Resolution of instruction to the Farmersville delegation.

Did the three bolters have this in mind when they deliberately cast three votes for McKinney?—Farmersville Times.

If Collin county is for Gen. Hogg for governor, that gentleman should be given the vote of Collin in the state convention, and all this wire-pulling to avoid an expression from the people is wrong. It is infamous.—Farmersville Times.

Wherever the people have had a fair expression of opinion in convention in Texas during this campaign, the gubernatorial plum has invariably been cast to J, S. Hogg. The great majority is infavor of him, while the political pope and priests are laying all kinds of traps to lock the convention and impose one of their servile monopoly tools upon the people. For example, see how our own county is being cheated out of a popular expression on the question of governor. Our delegates will probably use their utmost power to enthrone a railroad stock-watering fraud upon us for governor.

Hon. Silas Hare has the sympathy of the people of this district in his sad bereavement.

Sherman, Tex., June 5.—Mrs. O. E. Hare, wife of Congressman Hare, died this morning. The judge, his son, Lieut. Luther Hare of the United States army, and all of the family were present. Mrs Hare was a good neighbor, kind friend, loving wife and mother. She will be sadly missed. The funeral takes place Friday at 10 o'clock.

From John Johnson.

McKinney, June 10, 1890.

Editor Democrat.

The convention is over and the candidates named. If there is any truth in what the people say, outside of two of the nominees, their names are Dennis.

There were two speeches made in the convention which will be remembered as long as any democrat who heard them lasts. The first one was mede by the chairman of the executive committee. He seemed to think that the destiny of the democratic party of old Collin depended entirely upon the action of that convention. He said that he had seen the democratic flag trailing in the dust in 1886, by the pretended democrats.

The other gentleman who spoke was the president of the so-called democratic club. He made the only speech I ever heard that claimed the people had no rights. He said that it made no difference what the instructions to the delegates by the people were, or what they thought the people wanted, it was their duty to do what they thought was the best for the democratic party. He seemed to think he knew what was best and all the delegates had to do was to follow him.

I will give my opinion about the democratic flag trailing in the dust in 1886. The flag of third-termism and part of ex-officioism, combination and trustism, railroadism, and county robberyism trailed in the dust in the year 1886 in old Collin. The same flag is sure to trail in the dust next November, and also all candidates who are not for Hogg and the commission will go down with the flag of corruption.

JOHN JOHNSON.

Shall we have a Farmers Institute in Collin?

The State Agricultural College will be in vacation during July and the professors of the college will devote the month in holding Institutes in different parts of the state. They have signified their willingness to meet with us about the 22d & 23d of July next. The management of Texas Farm and Ranch and many other able Institute workers can be had or the asking. Much lasting benefit will result to every interest and especially to farmers and stock raisers.

Everything will be open and free. Everybody will be invited and the latest discoveries and most advanced thought in our productive enterprises will be discussed in most lively style. We can't afford to miss this opportunity of inspiring our people to take renewed and rapid strides toward better methods and more diverse productions. We cordially invite all who feel an interest in holding this Institute to send us their suggestions and assure us of their attendance. Every part of this and surrounding counties should be represented. All county papers will please take lead in this work. We all need more reading and thinking and whetting on each other. Every worker knows something that would be of value to his neighbor and while all would gain no one would loose. When and where shall we hold this meeting?

The "matter is" our institutions have been perverted from their proper purpose. The original design of free institutions of justice, liberty, law and commerce was to protect the weak against the strong. This purpose is reversed. The strong demand special privileges of congress, legislatures, courts and corporations, and those demands are granted. The weak demand special privileges, and not having the persuasive power of money they are met with the charge of "paternalism," "class legislation" and unconstitutionality.

The Thorne type-setting machine is a great success. It will reduce the expense of setting and distributing type more than one-half. Books and papers will be cheaper and people will have better opportunities to peep into the inner vale of things and be prepared for the trap-springing boodlers. This machine and a cheap, simple device for compressing cotton were among the many wonders at the great Spring Palace.

Road of life.

"Life is before you; from the fated road
You cannot turn; then take ye up the load.
Not yours to tread or leave the unknown way.
Ye must go o'er it, meet you what ye may.
Gird up your souls within you to the deed,
Angels and fellow-spirits bid you speed.
—BUTLER."

How true! When once the road of life is entered man must travel to its utmost consummation, be it long and weary, or short and fleeting. There is no alternative, no deviation, no substitute, but the notes of time move him along this earthly road from the little, prattling, uncouth babe to boyhood; from the gay, frolicsome period of boyhood on to manhood, then to decrepit old age and finally to the end of the road of life. Each traveler on this royal road—for it is a "royal road"—is endowed with powers of mind and opportunities afforded to accomplish a great amount of good and to be able when he arrives at the journey's end, to lay many "golden sheaves" at the feet of his Lord, and receive a glad welcome in that home of all the justified.

In view of the fact that the road of life lies out before us, dear reader, and that we must "go o'er it;" meet we what we may, should we not make the most of it? Ah, already we—many of us—are nearing the final end; then why should we grow weary by the way? Why should we falter and yield to the burdens of life? Why, O, fellow-man, should we grow discouraged, when the thread of life at its utmost length, is very short, and the march of time will soon bring us to that end. Then brave the storms of life; with a manly resolution shun the bad and pursue the good; and make this indeed a royal road of life.

An Open Letter

To the Farmers of Old Collin.

There are many reasons why the laboring masses of our country should feel proud of the grand forward movements they have made and are still making to arouse to a more earnest and intelligent action, the sober, thinking, clear headed, hard-handed sons of toil in whose hands alone it is safe to risk the weal of this, the grandest government the world has ever known. The gospel that has been preached by the Alliance, the Grange and other honest labor organizations have been blessed and is still being blessed with most gratifying results.

It is my sober conviction that the taskmasters of the people, the leeches of our nation's life blood, notwithstanding their wide-mouthed vaporings and their secret and deep-laid scheming to hold the reins of government from constable to president that they may continue to feast, fatten and roll in wealth and luxury upon the hard earnings of the people, will sooner or later be relegated to the shades of oblivion where there will be wailing an gnashing of teeth.

It is true that we have not accomplished all that we desire yet our labors have not been in vain, for to-day the spirit of justice and mercy is stirring, and the strong arms of protection are reaching out toward the people and hence the ravings of the favored few. But we should be encouraged to move forward with confidence and firmness, for the day of salvation draweth nigh.

But now that these hopes are giving us new life and energy I want to urge again the importance of holding at least one farmers' institute in old Collin.

Every farmer realizes the fact that we need all the help that we can get, that we are living in an age of progress and improvement; that everything about us is moving with steam and lightning speed. We must keep ourselves abreast of the times. The days of reap hooks, scythe and cradle of wooden mould board and bull-tongue plows have passed. The days of puncheon floors and the seven-hands round dance to the music of "Jawbone walk" are gone and we must dance to a livelier music or not dance at all. Enterprising farmers in various portions of the state, are taking hold of farmers institutes in good earnest, and they are proving to be very enjoyable occasions, or meetings full of interest and profitable. It is interesting to every cotton raiser to hear a live, wide awake, enterprising and successful farmer give his experience in cotton raising; and so with corn or with the sorghum or with the many crops that are grown on our farms. The man who feeds cattle will be interested with a talk on silas silage and cattle feeding. The hog man will enjoy a good sensible hog talk, in fact there are many men just now becoming very much interest in hog. Well, I have always liked hogs. I take hog in mine nearly every day.

Now, brother farmer, if you want to enjoy one of the best "experience" meetings you were ever in, in your your life, and have a rich good time telling what you know and hearing others tell what they know, look out for an advertisement in your county paper of a farmers' institute to be held at McKinney sometime after the middle of July, and then be sure to come. Institutes are held with open doors and everybody is invited. There will be a farmers' institute held at San Antonio on July 4 and 5, Ennis July 22 and 23, Hopkins county 25 and 26, Palestine 28 and 29, Richardson, Dallas county, 18 and 19. All will be notified when we will meet at McKinney. Everybody come, but leave your dog at home.

The objection to the seven co. combine, headquarters at Dallas, is their arrogance in claim to be the "Democratic apostolic succession uninterrupted." They promulgate a "creed" and then declare that every man is excluded from the democratic primaries who doesn't subscribe to the "creed." Texas does not take kindly to political popes and cardinals, and political infability and excommunication without benefit of clergy doesn't go down with the average Texas Democrat.—Gazette.

Tin Wedding.

Mr. Tom Wilson and lady, living in East McKinney, sent out invitations last Saturday to a number of their friends to participate with them in celebrating their tenth marriage anniversary, Monday evening, June 9, 1890. At the appointed hour, 7:30, married couples could be seen wending their way to the hospitable home of Mr. Wilson and soon after, the happy group were enlivening that home with laughter and pleasant conversations. This scribe having received an invite and having also journeyed over the matrimonial road just ten years, and knowing the geniality of the kind host and hostess he couldn't think of absenting himself from this pleasant occasion. On reaching the residence, we were greeted by Mrs Wilson, whose face was wreathed in smiles, and whose warm greeting betokened the hospitality which generally characterize that lady. After entering the pleasant abode, Tom emerged from another room, and when we discovered him coming toward us we could plainly see from the laughing flashes which played over his face, that the inward feelings were none other than joyous, and in his expression he seemed to say: "It's a pleasant state to be married," and we felt that bachelor life was a humbug and he who traveled over life's fitful sea on the craft of single "blessedness." was robbed of the highest joy of his existence; that a tin wedding occasion, an event at the tenth mile post of the matrimonial path-way, was worth all old bachelorhood.

On casting our eyes toward a large center table we observed that Mr. and Mrs. Wilson had been well "tinned," by their friends. The table was literally covered with all kinds of tinware, from a neat little cup up to a fine lamp, and then it began to dawn upon the reporters mind that it was indeed a "tin wedding."

Supper was soon announced, and on entering the dining room we beheld a long table groaning beneath a rich and abundant supply of edibles. Our already sharpened appitite grew somewhat keener as dish after dish of good things were so generously passed over to us. The supper was well prepared and every guest thought it good to be there. After supper, of which ice cream and strawberries formed a delightful feature, the time was taken up by pleasant conversation and music, and when the hour of separation arrived the guests repaired to their respective homes well pleased with the tin wedding occasion which was somewhat of an innovation to some who participated therein.

These two loving hearts have passed through the joys and sorrows, trials and pleasures, vicissitudes and elysian days of marital life for ten long years. And it is our wish that before the sunset of life, upon the shore of eternity, shall end their journey together, they may reach their golden wedding day, and although hoary hairs may adorn their locks, we aver the same happy smiles and welcome will receive their friends with the same cordiality that characterized the occasion which so happily terminated last Monday night.

A Haunted House.

This body of ours has been likened to a tenement. It often has a haunted apartment—the stomach. Scared by the eldrich sprite, dyspepsia, digestion flies and refuses to return. What can break the spell, what can raise the ban laid upon the unhappy organs? We answer unhesitatingly, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and we are warranted in the response by the recorded testimony of myriads, covering a period of over a third of a century. A course of the Bitters, begun in any stage of the affliction, and persistently followed, will terminate in cure positive, not partial. The Bitters restores tone to the epigastric nerve, renews and purifies the juices exuding from the cellular tissue that act upon the food digestively, expels bile from the stomach and the blood, and promotes a regular habit of body. Malaria, kidney complaint, nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia give way to this medicine.

Paris Pickings.

PARIS, TEX., June 9, 1890.
Editor Democrat:

Paris the county seat of Lamar county, is situated at the crossing of the T. P. and Santa Fe railroad, thirty one miles from Sherman. Paris is well situated for trade, well watered, it has the sandy land on one side to furnish fruit and vegetables for its use and the black land on the other side to furnish cotton and corn in abundance for its support. Its close proximity to the Indian Territory brings a vast amount of trade. This little city claims a population of fourteen thousand. This is a lively town with a prospective boom in the near future and a promise of a new railroad soon. Paris has neat buildings, nicely paved streets, a magnificent court house and plenty of water, street cars, gas works, water works, canning factory, ice factory, compress, railroads and machine shops are among the objects of interest that meet the eye of a wayworn traveler. The Fedral court convened here on the 21st of April, 1890 with 189 cases from last term of court, 549 cases from the grand jury, 87 cases now before the jury making a total of 825 cases up to date. A majority of the visitors to Paris is either lawyers or witnesses on some case before the court. We have every class of individuals from the Almond-eyed celestial to the North American Indian; here one can see mankind in its purity; here goddess of society and fashion waves her mystic wand over a favored few; here we have law and equity thrown in balance along side of truth, virtue and innocence. The people here are very friendly and sociable, as a rule; several religious denominations predominate, splendid churches, good schools and a church going people, who take readily to every proposition of importance. Paris is a full-fledged sandy land town, consquently we have smooth streets and roads and a very nice and healthy place to live. The surrounding country is given chiefly to raising fruit, berries, melons, grapes and vegetables of all kinds. There is scarcely any cotton raised on the sand compared with the black land crops. Everything is quiet here politically no political wave of trouble passes across the breast of sunny, Paris the gay capital of Lamar County.

The health of this community generally is very good. Farmers are in fine spirits owing to the flattering prospects of the crops. We have had fine rains the past week and everthing is booming. Mr Clint Lacy and Miss Lorena Pool were married last Sunday week at the residence of Mr. C C. Dyer. The C pevill nominating convention met in due time to send delegates to the county convention which met in McKinney Saturday. There was one feature of the primary worthy of note, after the straights had canvassed the stores and blacksmith shops urging their men to come, there assembled the large number of thirteen, and one of them was an independent, having declared in favor of Allison before and after the meeting of the primary. This fact is significant when it is remembered that we have a voting population of from 150 to 180. The people of this community are almost unanimously in favor of a free for all race. Col. During the heated campaign an effort will be made by the Cook following to draw the attention of the people off the issue now before the people and push men to the front. Remember, as Hogg has proper and acceptable ideas of the commission so will he be found with the people on other questions affecting their interest.

THE PRACTICAL FARMER.

Some Selections from Leading Writers on Agricultural Matters.

A Profitable Business is that of Raising Poultry—Good Fresh Buttermilk and Fresh Eggs—Care Needed in Blacksmithing—Hints for the Housewife.

Care in Raising Poultry.

Most farmers read the poultry journals or articles on poultry in our farm papers with a great many mental reservations, especially when the question of profit is treated. As a general rule the conditions as to market are not so favorable on the farm as it is to those who constitute the majority of our poultry writers. They are generally breeders of thoroughbred stock and live close to the best markets, devote their whole time to the business and have the "inside" as to both quality and prices. But aside from these we judge the difference in profits is accounted for principally in the question of care. We often hear it said "if we only got the prices" of some supposed favored locality "then we could make it pay largely." But they forget that generally where large prices are received, large expenses in raising are found. Now the most pertinent points are the care in setting the hens and of the chicks until they are at least a month old. The common faults are setting hens where they are constantly disturbed by the laying ones; not examining the eggs to see if they are fertile, resulting in a comparatively small hatch and many of these killed in the nest. The little chicks receive the vermin from the mother, weakening if not destroying many of them; they are trailed about in the dew, caught out in many showers, in fact the disasters to the young chicks are legion in numbers.

Now first, the nest boxes should be so arranged that they can be slipped from the laying room through the partition into a quiet apartment, where nothing but the other setting hens and the attendant enters. Here feed and water with other necessaries are kept, and only an occasional outing is ever necessary, and but little attention otherwise is needed until the chicks are twenty-four hours old. Fanciers have much to say as to their food, but we take it that there is no special secret here. If the mother is lousy, as is apt to be the case, if care in a very special manner has not been given to house and fowls, put as much kerosene on it and lard mixed, on the heads of the chicks as will adhere to to the forefinger in two or three dippings, as you take them from the nest to the coop. Without the mother is known to be a very careful one, it is better to keep them confined in a coop in a dry place, frequently moving it, and in all cases they should be cooped during the mornings, nights and in wet and cold weather. By giving them at least this much care, the per cent. of loss may be reduced very much.

Fresh Buttermilk.

One of the most healthful giving drinks, a drink that will largely contribute to perfect digestion and so to pure blood is fresh buttermilk. On this subject Dr. Landay in Popular Science Monthly, recently wrote: I had missed my usual noon meal. It was about 2 or 3 p. m.—dinner of course was over—when I reached a farm house, weak, tired, hungry and "all out of condition" for active work. Dinner was suggested by the housewife. "No, indeed!" said I, "not this time; I am nearly home. But if you have any buttermilk, I will take a drink of that to stay my stomach." A good, kind-hearted woman, she soon brought up a pitcher of buttermilk from the cool spring house, while I examined my patients and prescribed for them. Perhaps a pint was drunk during the stay of nearly an hour. For months indigestion had held its unfriendly grasp on my stomach. From that notable day forward his reign was broken; my stomach was healed, and I could ride all day, if necessary without feeling so woe-begone from the lack of food as before drinking of the buttermilk.

Quality of Eggs.

Every one has noticed that eggs produced early in the season have a better flavor than those which hens lay after they run at large and live mainly on grass and insects. We mean, of course, when both are used equally fresh. The character of the feed has much to do with the quality of the eggs. Sometimes meat that has become too stale for the market is cut up and boiled for the hens, but though they eat it ravenously, one who knows the feed would not care to eat the eggs it produces. Cheap meats, if fresh and wholesome, are good, but judicious feeding of milk, wheat, bran, oats and other nitrogenous foods will make meat feeding unnecessary. Cotton-seed meal, mixed with other ground feed, is excellent for producing eggs, but it is too strong food to be fed to any stock in large quantities.

Who Is Your Blacksmith?

Are you indifferent as to whom you employ as a blacksmith so he does his work promptly and at reasonable or cheap rates? Read these cautions:

Do not get your horse shod at all unless necessary and when that necessity no longer exists let the shoe disappear with it.

On no account allow the frog or bars to be cut or the sole thinned out.

See that the shoe is made to fit the foot and not the foot to fit the shoe.

The less rasping done after the shoe is nailed on the better; if a correct fit has been obtained none will be necessary beyond a touch under each clinch to remove the horn fibers pushed through by the nails.

Never let shoes remain on longer than a month at the outside without being reset.

If it should be absolutely necessary to have your horse shod with calkings ("calks") have the calkings made as small and as short as possible, so that the frog may come to the ground. With all your getting, get frog pressure; and despite the possible sneers, smiles or prophcies of evil of your blacksmith, always bear in mind the good old maxim: "No frog no foot, no foot no horse."

Mice-Girdled Trees.

The ruin of many orchard trees, apple especially, by field mice gnawing in the bark at the surface of the ground and a few inches above, could have been prevented by raising a small mound of earth around each tree in the fall. This would have been necessary only in the case of trees growing in grass; for it is usually only in such situations that these depredations take place. The bad work having been done, however, unless there is some remedy death must follow, as the mice generally go clean around the tree, eating entirely through the inner bark, and severing the connection between root and top.

Quack Grass in Sandy Soil.

It is harder to rid sandy soil of quack grass for the reason that its roots are apt to run deeper. Besides this, a covering of sand over the green part does not smother it so readily as would a covering of more compact earth. Raking up the roots and burning them is the only sure way to rid sandy land of quack where it has obtained an entrance. If the soil is poor already this involves taking pretty much all its remaining fertility from it. On some kinds of sand where no other grass can be grown quack grass might profitably be planted. Its green herbage is better than barrenness.

Grass Around Fruit Trees.

When an orchard is in sod, it is impossible to plow close enough to the trees so as to cover all the grass. But there is loose dirt enough brought up by the plow to cover the grass if hoed over it, and this will suffice to smother it. The suppression of this grass around the trees makes them much more sightly during the summer, and in winter its absence leaves no harbor for mice, which love just such a shelter when gnawing apple-tree bark.

Convenient Harness.

Many common work harnesses are still used without the conveniences of snaps in place of buckles, which every horseman considers important. The time wasted in working at unhandy harness will pay for all these little improvements, besides the satisfaction which the owner feels in using them

The Housewife.

It is a good idea to keep large pieces of charcoal in damp corners and dark places.

Sponge or bread set to rise the first time will rise much more rapidly in a close vessel.

Telegraph wire of galvanized iron is much better to hang clothes on in winter than rope, as the clothes will not freeze to it. Have it hung by a lineman and it will never "give" no matter what the weather may be.

An easy way to make a pudding, and at the same time save cold rice that may be left from another meal, is to take one cup of the cooked rice, one pint of sweet milk, two eggs, lump of butter as large as a walnut, sugar to taste, a cup of raisins and nutmeg to flavor. Beat the eggs, sugar and butter together, then add the other things, and bake or steam until done.

Borax water is excellent for sponging either silk or wool goods that are not soiled enough to need washing. In washing cashmere or wool goods, put a little borax in the water. This will cleanse them much more easily and better, without injury to the colors. Do not rub them on a board, but use the hands, and throw on a line without wringing. Press them on the wrong side, and they will look almost like new.

All grained work should be washed with cold tea and wiped with a soft flannel cloth. For windows and picture frames soft flannel cloths with soapsuds, and, after wiping dry, polished with chamois leather, is far better than anything else. They leave no lint and are better than paper, which often scratches glass, and if you would best rid your walls of dust, wrap a cloth round a broom, while a solution of hot salt water or hot alum water will drive away insects of all sorts.

Exploring Northern Mexico.

"After completing my lecture tour—going as far west as San Francisco—I am off," said Dr. Carl Lumholtz the other day, "on an entirely new scientific expedition to northern Mexico, under the auspices of the New York Geographical Society. The exploring party will comprise fourteen men, including four American scientists. They will cover botany, zoology, mineralogy and archaeology. My work will be to study the natives. We shall also thoroughly investigate the ruins and cliff dwellings. The territory covered will embrace southern Arizona and the region far to the southward. This is a country that, I am given to understand, has never yet been scientifically explored. We confidently expect to make many important discoveries during the two years which we shall devote exclusively to the expedition."—New York Tribune.

Rapid Transit on the Prairie.

H. L. Earle, who is connected with the Judson Pneumatic Company, has recently been in Dakota, and told a New York Press Reporter of an invention that he saw there: "There is a genius out there," said he, "who has invented a sailing apparatus for a wagon and sweeps over the prairies with it at the rate of sixty to seventy miles an hour. He says he can go up to eighty or a hundred miles, but I wouldn't want to risk myself at even the lowest speed. I sailed with him at about forty miles an hour, and that was rapid enough for me. He has just the skeleton of a buggy with a seat on it. The shafts are turned backward, so that his knees strike them as he sits on the seat, and he can shift the direction of the wheels by his knees. He has a brake right in front of him to operate by hand, and the sail is on a mast right over the lynch pin of the front gear. Old Preacher Jasper used to say, 'The sun do move.' I tell you that wagon do move. The sail operates exactly as if it was on a boat, and by tacking you get the effects of boating."

Meets It Constantly

Harper's Bazar: "May I ask whether you can ever expect to meet your indebtedness?" Hardup—"Meet it? Why, great Scott, man, I meet it every time I go into the street! Don't you throw it in my face often enough?"

A Good Dig

A colored man named Joseph Saunders was employed to dig a well for a farmer near Augusta, Me. The farmer beat him down to half wages, but after going ten feet down the digger struck a jug with $750 in gold in it and took a skip. The farmer then dug twenty-two feet more, nearly broke his back and didn't hit anything but stones.

THE BOWSERS.

Mr. Bowser's Delinquencies Related for the Hundredth Time—His Forgetfulness.

The other night I was taken with a ort of pleurisy pain and I nudged Mr. owser and asked him to get up and ix me a mustard plaster. He lay on he broad of his back, hands locked nder his neck, and was snoring as if fred to give a midnight performance n a fog-horn.

"Eh! Yes!" he growled as I nudged im.

"Mr. Bowser, get up!"

"Yum! Lemme 'lone!"

"Mr. Bowser, I am in great pain?"

"Yes, I know."

Will you get up?"

"Whaz mazzer now?" he demanded s he tried to sit up in bed.

"I am threatened with pleurisy."

"Hey! Who is it?"

"I am threatened with pleurisy, and I lo wish you would get up and mix a mustard plaster for me."

"Bosh!" he growled, now fully awake. "You just lie quiet and the pain will go way."

He dropped back and began to snore gain, but after ten minutes' hard work got him out of bed. He sat on the dge staring blankly into vacancy, and eady to fall back any moment, and ven while I was telling him that I ight not live till morning he fell over, icked himself under the clothes and ent to sleep while I was pulling his air.

A night or two later, just after the ells struck 12, I dreamed that I was eing chased by a locomotive. It gave n extra toot and awoke me, and I disovered that toot to be Mr. Bowser's oice groaning:

"For the land's sake get up or I shall e a dead man!"

"What is it?"

"Terrible cramps in my stomach, I'm ast tied in a knot."

"Oh, it's only a passing pain," I relied, as I sought the pillow again. Lie still and it will soon go off."

"Lie still, thunder!" he yelled, as he ot one leg out of bed. "I tell you I hall be a corpse within an hour if I on't get relief!"

"Well, you'll find the Jamaica ginger n the sideboard. Take a big dose of in wine."

"I'll never find it. Oh, heavens! what a pain!"

I wanted to get up, of course, but I was determined to pay him back in his wn coin; I therefore apparently fell sleep, and, after banging around the oom a few minutes, he went out. He vas back again in three minutes, however, to exclaim:

"Are you going to lie there and let ne die like a sick horse?"

"But you didn't get up for me."

"I know it, but that was because I——whoop! Blue blazes, but I know I'm dying!"

I had to get up of course, and, of ourse I had him relieved in a quarter f an hour. Man-like he was frightened o death at a pain which he would have xpected me to keep perfectly still bout.

Mr. Bowser is also like all other husband's in another matter. We got tarted for the theater the other night, nd I discovered that I had forgotten ay opera-glasses. He offered to run ack for them, and I said:

"They are hanging in the bag on the as-jet on the left-hand side of our resser. You can't fail to find them."

Five minutes slipped away—then ten —then I hurried back myself. He was eated in a chair in the hall, hat and overcoat off, and as I opened the door e growled:

"Might as well take off your things?"

"But why?"

"We are not going to any theater his night."

"Not going! Has anything happened?"

"I should say there had. I've looked his infernal house from top to bottom or those glasses and they are not to be ound. We'll put in our evening trying to discover whether they are up in he garret or down in the vegetable-ellar."

"Mr. Bowser, I told you where those lasses were."

"They are not within forty rods of t."

"Come up-stairs."

"No use. If they are even in your oom I'll buy you five million silk resses!"

"Come on."

He followed after, and there hung the ag just where I had told him he would ind it. I looked from one to the other, nd Mr. Bowser finally said:

"I see how it is. You'll probably say ou told me to look here instead of the pare bedroom dresser! Take off your hings, Mrs. Bowser; we don't stir a oot outside to-night!"

One night when baby was sick I got Mr. Bowser out of bed to get the paregoric. After a great deal of yawning nd growling he marched off downtairs, and for the fifth time I told him:

"I remember to have placed it on hat bracket over the lounge."

I heard him thrashing around and nocking about in the sitting-room, ummaging in the pantry, and upsetting chairs in the kitchen, and after bout ten minutes he appeared at the oot of the stairs and shouted:

"I've looked the consarned house all ver and can't find it."

"I told you it was on the bracket."

"I know you did, but it isn't there."

"Sure you have looked?"

"Do you take me for an idiot?"

"Well, I'll come down."

I went down, walked with him to the racket, and there sat the bottle before is eyes.

"But it wasn't there a minute ago," e protested. "I looked the bracket ver at least five times, and I know I'm not blind. Mrs. Bowser, there are ome queer happenings about this ouse. I think it best that we sit down and have some straight talk."

One day at noon he wanted me to ighten a button on his overcoat, and I ent him up to my room to get the box of thread and needles.

"You'll find it on the sill of the bay window, where I left it half an hour ago," I cautioned him as he went upstairs.

I heard him prancing around and slamming things about, and after seven or eight minutes I went up to ascertain the cause of delay.

He had pulled every bureau drawer out, taken down most of the garments in the clothes press, and was then overhauling my jewelry case.

"I'd like to know if there was another woman like you in Detroit?" he exclaimed as I appeared.

"You came up here for the thread box, didn't you?"

"Of course I did!"

"And I told you it was on the sill of the bay window."

"But it——"

I pointed it out for him, and after changing countenance and swallowing a lump he braced up and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, it is time to quit this tom-foolery! You are too old for such girlish tricks. Next time you try to make a fool of me I'll ask you to select such furniture as you want and settle on the amount of alimony!"—Detroit Free Press.

Eye-Piece for the Lick Telescope.

The Gundlach optic works of this city have just completed an eye-piece for the great Lick telescope. The eye-piece is constructed on a perfected theory and is a great deal larger than any before made. Eye-pieces of the same pattern are in use in many of the observatories in the country, and everywhere excellent results are obtained. The Gundlach glass uses all the light gathered by the large field lens and at the same time covers the area of the larger glass of the telescope. There are two lenses in this eye-piece. They are six inches apart. The larger one is called the field lens, and is 6 1-2 inches in diameter. The other lens is the eye-glass proper. It is 3 inches in diameter, and is composed of three lenses, a double concave, double convex, and meniscus, cemented together. The field lens is of crown glass. The concave and convex lenses are also of crown glass. The meniscus, or correcting lens, is of flint glass. No other eye-piece of anything like equal dimensions has ever been made. The largest now in use is not over 2 inches in diameter, and that is far above the average size. The light from heavenly bodies seen through the Lick telescope and this eye-piece will be 20,000 times as bright as that seen with the naked eye.—Rochester Democrat.

One On Tennyson.

A few years ago some enthusiastic admirers of Tennyson gave a large dinner party in his honor, and invited all their choicest friends in the world of literature and art to meet him. Tennyson, who rarely accepts an invitation, did, for a wonder, put in an appearance on this occasion, but during the first half of the dinner caused the greatest disappointment by remaining absolutely silent, and as if lost in the most profound reverie. The guests who expected to hang on words falling like pearls of thought from his lips, gazed somewhat wistfully upon him, when, rousing suddenly he exclaimed in a loud, stentorian voice: "I like my mutton cut in chunks!" It is likely that there was something of malice prepense in this burst of confidence, and that the poor man felt a not unnatural irritation at being gaped at and a corresponding desire to punish the offenders.

An anecdote told not long ago by his daughter-in-law is amusing, in that it shows how the greatest are not incapable of stooping to the little weaknesses. Some very dear friends of Tennyson, who had been spending some years in Persia, returned to London, and, anxious to renew old ties, wrote inviting him to their house. But Tennyson mistook the day, and arriving at the domicile, found the birds flown. Sitting down to write a note of explanation, he had the misfortune to throw the contents of a well-filled ink-bottle all over the beautiful new white Persian carpet. The maid-servant, in answer to his summons, appeared with a large jug of new milk which she poured over the offending ink-stain.

"I'll give you five shillings, my good girl, my very good girl," continued Tennyson, in much agitation, "if you will only get rid of that abominable ink before your master and mistress come home."

And together, on their hands and knees, poet and servant rubbed at the wretched carpet until not a spot remained. The girl earned her five shillings, and when a few weeks afterward, Tennyson went to dine with his friends, he had every reason to believe that she told no tales. At any rate, his hostess displayed their gorgeous carpet without signs of consciousness.—San Francisco Wasp.

Things as They Are.

It was Holland who, in his book "Nicholas Minturn," said: "In this world we must take things as they are not as they should be." Holland was in his day, a popular writer, and wrote some pretty fair books, but he laid down a wrong principle when he wrote the sentiment quoted above, says Ed R. Pritchard in the Arkansaw Traveler.

Legitimately carried out, it would stop the wheels of progress and reform and leave the whole human race in a deplorable position. It implies that we must be contented with the things as we find them. Had Copernicus Newton, and Martin Luther acted on this principle of accepting things as they found them the world would just now be barely emerging from the condition it was in during the middle ages.

It is safe to say that a spirit of discontent at the existing state of affairs lies at the bottom, the beginning of all great reforms.

Copernicus was not satisfied with the theories of the scientists of his time regarding the motions of the heavenly bodies, so he investigated for himself and made discoveries that completely overthrew the doctrines of his associates and set the world right when from the beginning it had been wrong. So Newton, in the same spirit of dissatisfaction with the accepted philosophy of his day, gave to the world his valuable discovery of the law of gravitation. So Martin Luther, disgusted with the existing state of affairs in the catholic church, and not content to take them as he found them, started the reformation, and, in doing it, set the world on the broad highway leading to intellectual light and freedom.

Pretty Finger Nails.

"Your nails always look so nice," I overheard one dámsel remark to another not long ago, says a correspondent. "Do you go to a manicure every day?"

"Oh, no, I have never been to one for it is the easiest thing in the world to take care of one's own nails—just a little care every day."

"Well, I've tried, and I can't make mine look even decent. Tell me what you do."

Here I listened for the prescription, which in sum and substance was as follows:

"In order to keep the skin back from the nail I use a nail-brush freely—using it on the nails particularly. Then, in drying my hands, I work the towel from the point of the nail back toward the finger. I cut my nails often, and don't let them get too long. By cutting the nails in such a way that the corners do not adhere to the skin, hang-nails can be avoided and the shape of the nails changed. Where the nails are thin and inclined to break, frequent oiling is necessary, and the nails should never be polished, except when some oily substance is used besides the powder. This keeps the nails more pliable, and no matter how thin they are, if properly treated they are not more liable to break than thicker ones. Another thing that is bad for the nail is polishing them too roughly. They should be lightly touched and not rubbed until they become heated. This is one cause of white spots coming on the nail and marring its beauty. A little attention every day will make any hand look nice."

Gold at 60 Cents a Pound.

A Birmingham man, who does not wish his name to appear has been experimenting for a year on a metal resembling gold, and has his discovery nearly perfected. He stumbled on the combination at first, while analyzing some metals, and when he realized what he had found he soon produced a metal which puzzles the best of jewelers. All the aluminums before discovered are lacking in weight or in some other essential point. This new metal is as heavy as gold and, to all appearances is the precious metal itself. It can be manufactured at a cost of about 60 cents a pound and will make the best foundation for gold-plated goods that can be found. It is easily worked and can be either hammered or drawn. The metal is no compound, it being only one kind, reduced to its gold-like appearance by the application of certain chemicals. The inventor says there is no use in taking out a patent as no one can discover the secret of its manufacture by analyzing it.—N. Y. Sun.

FASHION'S FANCIES.

Beautiful Dresses Made Hundreds of Miles from Home.

NEW YORK, May, 1890.—We are going to tell you something interesting in connection with these beautiful Redfern designs. You all know that it is easy enough for a dressmaker or tailor to take a viva voce order and to fit an animate figure of flesh and blood, but it is not everyone who can fill a mail order from thousands of miles away and guarantee a perfect fit and thorough satisfaction to the recipient of the ordered garments. Redfern, however, can do this by means of that perfectly equipped mail order department which is now such an important part of the famed New York branch of this firm. And this is how he does it: The morning's mail, we will assume, brings a letter from Mrs. B. way out in Omaha, intimating that neither joy nor peace will be hers until she is the blissful possessor of a braided cloth gown. To this one of the correspondng clerks (English, you know, like all the rest of them,) reply enclosing a package of samples and sketches and a formula to be filled out with the bust, neck and waist measurements, etc., requesting the loan of a well fitting bodice. When the latter arrives it is fitted to a dummy up in that big room where abide some dozens of these silent, peaceable figures. When one is found which fills its proportions, the new gown is cut and fitted, finished and sent off, and the result is so altogether pleasing that our Omaha fame immediately sends another order to be filled in the same way.

And now, having fitted out that far away customer, let us see what the outdoor, summer girl is to have this season.

Well, for one thing, a very jaunty new tennis blouse, stamped with Redfern hallmark. It is of white tennis flannel, with deep pointed yoke, belt and cuffs of bright red China silk, polka-dotted with white. The bottom is shaped into scallops which are outlined with a double row of red braid. The same idea, reversed, is carried out in white braid upon the yoke.

The very pretty tennis gown, pictured n our next sketch, s narrow blue and white striped tennis cloth, with a wide skirt border of plain blue. From the pointed girdle of blue, our bands extend up above the bust line, each one widening at the top, where it has a white braided medallion, representing a tennis ball. A sash is drawn up very narrow in front, and falls in large ds at the back.

In the gown illustrated here the most marked features are the pleated, cape drapery upon the bodice, and the embroidered and braided part of the skirt. This is done in dark green and silver upon light gray cloth, the rest of the gown being of dark stem green serg

Modern Farming.

Farming, like every other business in these latter days of sharp competition, must be differently conducted from what it was in the days of our fathers. It requires more capital, more brains and greater activity to insure success than formerly, and unless one has the two former, and is willing to be wideawake, he may better let not only farming alone, but every other business, and work for some one else who is properly furnished to conduc his affairs successfully. Such a one will soon bring up the value of any farm that we may acquire.

The Best Recommend.

The best recommend a skilled mechanic can give is a specimen of his workmanship and the most satisfactory recommendation for a medicine is its good effect. Now Smith's Tonic Syrup, made by Dr. John Bull, of Louisville, Ky., has been used with good effect in many thousand instances. It needs no other recommend than this. It does every time what is expected of it. If used for chills and fever it cures as certainly and completely as water quenches thirst. In many localities it has almost altogether taken the place of quinine. It has surer effect on chills and fever than quinine, for it has cured many cases where quinine did no good whatever, and then it never produces the after effect quinine frequently has on the system, such as nausea in the stomach, headache, dizzy sensations, etc. When a person has once used it in place of quinine they will ever after prefer it.

WYOMING'S CAPITAL.

In the Congressional report upon the admission of Wyoming, many facts were given going to show her as richer in resources than any of her sisters, and no territory ever applied for admission so thoroughly qualified. This report shows the CAPITAL, CHEYENNE, to be one of the wealthiest cities of its size in the world, and certainly the most favored and prosperous. The Union Pacific Railway is now constructing shops there to cost $6,000,000, and employ 2,500 men. This fact, coupled with the early admission of the State assured, is causing a rush to CHEYENNE, but her realty is still low, offering the best investment in the West. We have the best unimproved residence property in the city, and our prices are even lower than that immediately adjoining. We are offering only alternate blocks, and to induce a quick response we will, to a limited amount, take two-fifths in clear lands or chattles, a small cash payment, balance in one and two years, at seven per cent. semi-annual interest. There's the Dinner Bell!

What a clattering and a clattering as the children answer the dinner bell, and rush in to the dining room. Oh! the gratification a good appetite affords us as our noon day's meal is set before us, but this vacant chair, what does it mean? Oh, that is Uncle Charley's seat, unless he don't feel like eating, he's got dyspepsia, you know." Dyspepsia! horrors! Deliver us from dyspepsia. What is the use of being plagued with such an ailment anyway? What's the use of having a stomach so irritated and sore that even one bite of food gives it distress? Why not heal the sores, and allay the irritation and strengthen its muscular processes by using Botanic Blood Balm. Will it cure? It certainly will. Many, many a former dyspeptic owes his enjoyment of life to B. B. B. Give it a trial.

S. J. Chandler, Richmond, Va., writes: "No one can afford to be without B. B. B. who wishes an appetite. I could scarcely eat a single biscuit for breakfast, but since taking B. B. B. I clean the whole table, so to speak."

The height of fashion and the height of folly are so much alike.

Common sense teaches us that a thorn or splinter in the flesh must be removed before the part can heal. Malaria in the system must be destroyed before health can return. Man can suggest more good things in an hour than he will do in a year.

Away with the bitter, nauseating, nasty, sweet-tasting chill tonics. Use Cheatham's Tasteless Chill Tonic, as pleasant to the taste as rock candy syrup. The children cry for it, the mothers won't live without it, and the servants slip it from the sideboard. It aids digestion, contains no Quinine, Arsenic or Strychnine, tones up the system, and is warranted. No cure no pay.

The trouble with charity is that you will find most of it in shiftless men.

He Got His $15,000.

[Adelphi (Ohio) News, May 16.]

Mr. William H. Shupe, the gentleman who recently won $15,000 in the drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery Company, was a visitor to our sanctum on Tuesday. Mr. Shupe informed us that he had received the money last Saturday, a draft for the amount having been sent him through Adams Express agency in Circleville, and the Second National bank of that place received and cashed the draft. Mr. Shupe stated that the Lottery Company was very prompt in sending the money and looked after its transportation with as keen an interest as he would himself. For all of which he feels thankful.

He has been investing in The Louisiana State Lottery Company for twenty-five months past, and previous to drawing the $15,000 he was nearly a hundred dollars ahead of that institution. He held the one-twentieth of ticket No. 21,303, which drew the first capital prize of $300,000.

IN THE SPRING MONTHS

Nature should be assisted when the system is changing from the full habit of the winter months to the lighter diet of the warm season. Nothing does this as well as S. S. S. It stimulates the sluggish blood and rids the system of heaviness and the feeling of languor. If there is poison in the blood, it generally shows itself in the spring, and this is the season to help nature to drive it out and be cured.
